Excerpt from A Report of Surgical Cases: Treated in the Army of the United States From 1865 to 1871 The returns of die Army for the past five years present a comparatively large number of gunshot wounds, received either in Indian hostilities, or accidentally, or in brawls, or attempts to evade or escape from arrest. The more important of these cases will be enumerated, as nearly as may be in the order of the anatomical regions in which the wounds were inflicted, with such subdivisions as are most convenient. Guxshot Wouxm OP the Head.-Few of the cases of this series present peculiarities, yet some of them are not devoid of interest. Private Richard Jenkins, On. B, 82d United States Colored Troops, aged 25 years, was accidentally wounded, at St. Augustine, Florida, mi April 26, 1866, by the explosion of a fowling-piece. A fragment of iron perforated both tables of the frontal bone. He was admitted to the post hospital, where the foreign substance was extracted, and cold water dressings were applied, He was returned to duty May 25, 1866. At Fort Larned, Kansas, Artificer Charles Andruss, Co. K, 3d United States Infantry, was wounded November 8, 1868, near Fort Gibson, Cherokee Nation, by the accidental discharge of a musket. The case was reported in the Monthly Report of Sick and Wounded, for March last, from which this is an extract. The ball entered the side of the neck, passed across the mastoid process, and through the external ear; the bone was slightly injured, and the external ear nearly destroyed. He was treated in hospital at Fort Gibson, Cherokee Nation, until February 18th, 1868, when he was sent to...
